SANTA CLAUS STORE-HOUSE NOW LOOKING LIKE TREASURE SPOT

Poor Kiddies' Appeal Meets Instant Response From City's More Fortunate Youngsters-Tables Piled

Banta Claus' Store House at 60% Chestmut street, though only one day old, and a fearfully rainy, sleety day at that, al-ready has taken on an appearance of a real treasure room.

The appeal of the poor children at home, whose plight is not nearly so spectacular as that of the little Beigian Foungsters, but is quite as real, has met with an instantaneous response, and yes-terday the Santa Claus Lady had all she could do to take care of the numerous precious bundles which the parcel post-man and the express company employs tumbled out of their wagons.

The two tables which Santa Claus has provided to hold the offerings are piled high with lovely dolles and toys that little Philadelphia girls and boys have sent in. There are wonderful forts with dapper soldiers marching about in them, designed to set some youngster's heart dancing wild with joy; there are whole sets of dainty doll dishes, animals whole sets of dainty doll dishes, animals enough to fill a good-sized menagerie, and even some practical gifts of warm clothing and underwear.

CHILDREN SHOULD COME AND SEE. Every child in Philadelphia is invited to come to the Store House and see the gifus which Santa is going to have distributed on Christmas morning in the Public and Evening Ledger automobiles.

Yesterday Charles and Dorothy Young, children of Charles W. Young, sent a huge box containing a haif-dozen dolls, a so-cart for a real baby, a pretentious fort and a wonderful menagerie. From a practical youngster from Newark, N. J., came two sweaters, a pair of rubber overshoes and several sets of woolen underwar.

Little Dorothy Parker, who, according to a letter from her grandmother, is "an invalid who cannot walk very much, taking two to help her in her chair of to put her at the table and has very little use of her hands or arms," has contributed several beautiful dollies, which she dressed all by herself after much painstaking labor, and a collection of books that she packed for "the poor little children."

And little Sara and Ethel Stafford, who dergarten pupils. evidently had no toys left from their hast year's supply, sent a whole dollar to the Santa Claus lady, requesting her to buy some sice new toys for the poor

A TINY INQUIRER.
An incident which shows how eagerly some of the kiddles are looking forward to a Christmas which is going to be a real Christmas which is going to be a real Christmas to them—perhaps the first they have ever had—was demonstrated pasterday when a mite of a boy walked into the Store House and saked what he would have to do in order to be very sure of "gettin' somethin' from Sanity's automobile on Christmas morning?" He had no umbrella, but had come a long way in order to ask this important query.

"Be a good boy," said the Sanig Claus lady, taking his name, "and I am sure he will bring you somethin."

So that there will be enough toys to go around every child is asked to give some little contribution to Santa's Store House—a penny, a nickel, a discarded toy—so that this Christmas will be a less one-sided affair than is usually the case, so that it will be a day for all children instead of just for the chosen few.

WOODLAND AVENUE SITE FOR CITY STADIUM OPPOSED

Northwest Business Men's Association Adopts Formal Protest.

The proposed site for the municipal stadium in a ravine in Woodland Ceme-tery, as suggested by George E. Nitrche, recorder of the University of Pennayirecorder of the University of Pennayivania, was opposed last night by a committee of the Northwest Business Men's Association. The committee drafted a formal protest to be sent to the Mayor and Councils, and this was authorized by the association.

Besides opposing the Woodland Cometery land as a site for the proposed stadium, the committee reported unfavorably on the plan to use one of the Commercial Museum buildings for the conven-

HERE'S A LAZY, TIRED LAD. SEEKING LABOR BY AN AD

A Really Unusual, Singular Youth Whose Qualification's Telling the Truth.

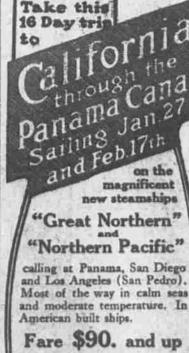

"Young man. 22, no education, no ability, no experience, not ambitious, desires a position with a brilliant future. E 640, Ledger Central."

Somewhere a young man who is shy of ambition, ability, pluck and desire to vork; who has in his heart for these facts no contrition and openly says he is anxous to shirk, is waiting in tranquil and Pickles to Buy Gifts for soft indecision for some one to give him a lucrative place; and meantime he's chuckling in scorn and derision at those who run hard in life's haphazard race.

"E 649" is the cloak that the fellow has taken to keep off the crowd from his gate that surely would rush for a youth with so mellow an outlook on life and so honest and straight. In truth, he is candid and naught of a hedger who seeks for a job through a well written ad set forth to the city this morn by the Labour; in truth, he is frank, or a jocular lad.

Be that as it may, he is seeking employ-ment that holds forth a future unruffled and gay; that will not cut into his lazy enjoyment nor ask him to work when he wishes to play; a job that will let him be free as the breezes, that will not demand of him knowledge or brain; alas, if it does, opportunity ceases; he openly says he has neither to strain.

He openly says he has no education, and this should endear him to men who seek aid: who picks up a worker without aberration about the stupendous, commendable grade of what's in his head is in luck, there's no doubting. Big business should rush for this straightforward youth, who, devious methods of other men flouting, comes out in an ad with the whole of the truth.

THE MAN BEHIND SANTA CLAUS

That's "Dad"

Because you live with him all the year 'round he doesn't seem like a romantic figure. But without him there wouldn't be any Christmas.

He pays-for the turkey, the tree and the trinkets. Sometimes it comes a little hard, but he "doesn't like to disappoint the folks."

When you ask him what he wants for himself he says:

"Oh, don't bother about me. There isn't anything I want. Better save your money or spend it on some one else."

And too often you do spend it on some one else.

Don't take him at his word when he says he doesn't want anything. He wants many things, but he is leaving a loophole of escape for people small enough to crawl through.

The Wanamaker Stores for Men are filled with things men like-not the things women think men like but the things men buy for themselves. As gifts, they cannot be surpassed, for besides telling of your regard they save a man the expense of getting them some other time.

A New Suit Would Be a Substantial Gift
